In 2004, Congress passed legislation to appoint an official envoy to monitor and combat anti-Semitism. Despite constant pressure from Jewish groups, Trump hasn't appointed anyone to this post yet. So Jews made Congress create a new bill to make this appointment mandatory. (1/3)

Last week, the House of Representatives passed this new bill 411 to 1. This bill will use the new definition of Anti-Semitism which includes criticism of Israel and it will force every future administration to appoint someone to this post - which will likely be a Jew. (2/3)

This bill was passed under a suspension of rules, allowing Congress to skip procedural rules and proceed straight to a vote. This happens for non-controversial bills like naming a post office. I guess restricting our freedom to criticize Jews & Israel is "non-controversial." 3/3

Overview

Suspension of the rules is a procedure generally used to quickly pass non-controversial bills in the United States House of Representatives.

Most often, bills "on suspension" are non-controversial legislation—such as naming Post Offices of the United States Postal Service or federal buildings—and nearly all bills that are considered under suspension rules have bipartisan support.
